Art Unit: 1714

Claim 31 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 31 fails to further limit claim 17 upon which it depends.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 32 and 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kauzlarich et al.

Kauzlarich et al discloses rubber compositions suitable for tire manufacture. These compositions are taught as comprising applicants' claimed ingredients in amounts at least overlapping those claimed in the rejected claims. Applicants process limitations are not given patentable significance without a showing of patentably distinct properties flowing from said process.

Therefore, the reference anticipates the rejected claims.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 17-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over EP '121 in view of Kauzlarich et al.

Kauzlarich et al disclose compositions suitable for tire manufacture as discussed above. This reference fails to recite the process steps of the instant claims.

The EP '121 reference discloses processes and an apparatus for batch mixing rubber compositions. The apparatus disclosed comprises two rotors and a piston for pressing ingredients into the mixing zone. The processes are taught as comprising the monitoring of multiple mixing variables including temperature, piston pressure, power and rotor speed (see page 3, lines 1-17 and page 4, lines 6-15).

While the reference may be silent as to frequency of measurement, the use of a computer processor allows for measurements at most any frequency desired and frequencies such as claimed by applicants are seen as having been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art desiring to produce predetermined values of sufficient efficacy for a particular blend of components.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to utilize the apparatus and processes taught by the secondary reference to produce the rubber compositions of the primary reference when optimized blending parameters were desired.
